TEST Clinical Provider Course -Maintaining a Healthy Professional Life: The Science Behind Self-Care	Clinical Provider Training	1.50 Attendance/Participation
Research shows that helping professionals are at high risk of being affected by the negative aspects of daily activities that entail working closely with individuals presenting with psychological distress and / or suffering. This training explains the positive and negative aspects of helping members who experience trauma and suffering and ways a helping professional can decrease their risks of burnout, and compassion fatigue.
